

gsa leased space

Quality space at a fair price delivered when you need it.

The U.S. General Services Administration (GSA), the nation's largest public real estate organization, provides workspace for more than 1.1 million federal workers, through GSA's Public Buildings Service (PBS). Approximately half of the employees are in buildings owned by the federal government, and half are located in over 7,200 leased buildings across the country.

PBS leases space in both cities and small towns when leasing is the only practical answer to meeting federal space needs. More than 50 percent of leases are for 10,000 square feet or less of space, so building owners do not have to be a corporate giant to compete for lease contracts.

Scope of GSA Leasing

PBS leases all types of space, including offices, laboratories, warehouses, clinics, and border stations in urban, suburban and rural areas throughout the United States and its territories.

Lease Conditions

To satisfy various needs, GSA leases space in a wide range of sizes, locations, and terms; thus, each Solicitation for Offers for a new lease differs in its requirements. The size of a lease opportunity may range from a single room to an entire building. Initial alterations to prepare space for occupancy differ according to the needs of the tenant agency. In some cases, new construction is solicited. Terms for GSA leases are usually 5 to 10 years, although some leases are for shorter duration or for as long as 20 years. The term is based on customer agency requirements and market conditions for the present and foreseeable future.

Offering Space to GSA

All requirements for space over 10,000 square feet are advertised in the federal business opportunities webpage at www.fedbizopps.gov or in local newspapers. Space requirements under 10,000 square feet are usually handled by a more informal canvassing of the market and contacts with potential offerors or a local newspaper ad. Property managers or owners interested in offering space to GSA for lease are encouraged to contact the appropriate regional office once a requirement for space is posted on the website. Regional offices no longer maintain mailing lists of interested parties.

Submitting a Proposal

Each Solicitation for Offers to lease space indicates the type and amount of space needed and the conditions of the lease. The solicitation also gives detailed information on how to submit a proposal, contact name and address, and the deadline by which it must be received in the regional office.

Lease Awards

GSA solicits offers on a competitive basis, negotiates with offerors, and for most acquisitions makes awards to the lowest priced acceptable offeror. Some solicitations also consider trade-offs between price and other factors. Typically for acquisitions greater than 10,000 square feet, the award is based on a rental rate that includes operating costs, taxes, building "shell" rate, and a specific allowance for the build-out of the tenant space. Once the award is made, the final costs of the build-out are determined based on the design drawings of the tenant's space. After acceptance of the space, GSA begins monthly rent payments in arrears.
